

Scotland and England will do battle for the Calcutta Cup when they meet at the BT Murrayfield Stadium on the opening weekend of the 2016 Six Nations Championship. This will be England's first match under new head coach Eddie Jones. Last season's corresponding fixture at Twickenham ended in a 25-13 victory for England. England and Scotland played the first ever International rugby match, way back in 1871, and have since contested a total of 133 test matches. England have won 73 of those matches, whilst Scotland have won 42 matches. There have been 18 drawn matches between the two nations, which is a record between two International teams.
